

If you want to be a butt party
Sneezing, yawning, stretching, and farting by name

I don't know when it will be, but...

For the next House of Representatives election...if I had the 3 million yen deposit, I would definitely go to the Legal Affairs Bureau and complete the candidacy procedures...

Because it costs money, I won't be making any speeches or handing out flyers outside, but...

I'll probably buy a lot of the cheapest copy paper and use my two home printers to send out flyers, but I'll probably buy a lot of the cheapest non-genuine ink and send out flyers at my own expense...

I'll print the cover...

Political party name,

If you want to be a butt party

Candidate name is,

Sneezing, yawning, stretching, farting

There's no doubt that this name will be a source of tears for announcers...

I'm sure you all know what the job entails...

"Small Capitalism"

"Leveling the Earth"

It will be ~~~

This is called dogeza
The unique Japanese style of apologizing

*Basic posture

1. Make sure there is no gap between your legs.
2. Rub your forehead on the floor and make sure it bleeds.
3. Maintain this position until your partner says "That's enough."

Today, I received 150 points (150 yen) from the Ponta Point survey, which is a part of my daily routine.

I immediately charged my au pay card, and with the remaining balance, I had about 160 yen. I used those points to buy some sweet fruit candy at Daiso for 108 yen.

First of all, I knew what sweetness tasted like, so there was no other option. 150 yen feels like a lot of money to me, so if I was even 1 yen short, I wouldn't be able to buy the product I wanted...

This is because a person's sense of money is influenced by their own values, so don't make fun of them...

Well, I don't think there's anyone who would consider 100,000 yen to be small change, but some people don't even fit it in their wallets.

Also, today, someone from overseas was moving, so I said goodbye in English, "Transfer? Be good future luck."

This is pretty much my daily diary.

Once the notice of the decision to commence a retrial has been received by both parties, oral arguments or a dismissal decision will be made. I think this is the order of the procedure...

Prime Minister, it looks like the times are actually changing...